Smith Sees Congressional Act Aimed Directly At Administration Plan

WASHINGTON, May 29—The administration's price control plan today was threatened by a growing senate movement to prevent use of subsidies to hold down food prices.

Food Administrator Chester C. Davis' statement that a general program of subsidies to hold prices in line would end in failure gave impetus to the drive to force revision of the OPA's program.

Chairman "Cotton Ed" Smith (D) S. C. of the senate agriculture committee, predicted positive congressional action to halt the administration plan.

He joined with Sens. Bushfield (R) S. D. and Aiken (R) Vt., in introducing a bill prohibiting the subsidizing of farmers in order to maintain the "roll back" directive on prices.

'CUSSERS' STRIKE OVER ACTIVITY OF REFORMER

CONSHOHOCKEN, Pa., May 29—Samuel Brown, an employee at the Alan Wood Steel Company plant in Conshohocken who refused to join a CIO union because the organization "cursed" today took a 30-day leave of absence to work on his farm.

And 400 employees who have been on strike for a week agreed to return to work Monday.

Brown's action caused cancellation of a strike vote scheduled for 1600 men employed at the Ivy rock plant of the company. Workers claimed they struck because of objections to Brown's asserted attempts to "reform" them and stop their "cursing."

BABY RECEIVES MEDAL AWARDED DEAD AIR HERO

A solemn ceremony was conducted Saturday afternoon at Lockbourne army air base, when Charles W. Oakley, Jr., seven month old son of Lieutenant Charles W. Oakley, received an air medal awarded posthumously to his father, Lieutenant Oakley, who was killed in Europe last August.

Presentation was made by Colonel Albert C. Foulk, commanding officer at Lockbourne. The baby was born October 21, two days after the award was made to Lieutenant Oakley.

The lieutenant was a student at Capital university, Columbus, when he entered service in 1940.

Federal agents finally caught up with him, in the army. His Boston board had called him up months ago and he is now a sergeant.

Mutual Aid Agreement Planned For Signing At Peace Table

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 29—A "new world charter" based on the mutual aid agreements signed by the United Nations within the past year is being developed at the international food conference for peace table signing, it was learned today.

The resolutions for the first inter-Allied parley will follow the pattern established by the mutual aid pacts and represent the initial step in establishing a new world economy based on the following:

1. Universal expansion of production.
2. Greater employment.
3. The exchange and increased consumption of all commodities.
4. Elimination of all forms of discrimination in international commerce.

TEEN AGE GIRLS ROB POLICEMAN, FACE JAIL TERM

NEW YORK, May 29—Two teen-age Brooklyn girls today awaited trial on burglary charges after the Richmond county grand jury indicted them in connection with a series of daylight burglaries.

The pair, whom police say confessed raiding Staten Island homes during the last three weeks, were Ida Halpern, 17, and Marion Vuzzo, 19. They were arrested after they had broken into the home of Police Captain George Patterson of New Brighton, allegedly stealing more than $310 worth of jewelry and clothing.

Internationale Dissolved As Timely Blow At "Fascist Beast"

MOSCOW, May 29—Dissolution of the Communist International, in the view of Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin, "ends the lie that Moscow allegedly intends to intervene in the life of other nations and Bolshevise them."

The move, he said, should facilitate the war against the Axis.

Stalin's statement was made in a letter by Harold King, special correspondent of Reuter's News Agency, asking the opinion of the Soviet marshal.

Passage of a resolution by the executive committee of the Comintern recommending dissolution of the Third International was revealed a week ago today. The action was taken by the committee on May 15 and urged that Communist groups in individual countries operate without direction from Moscow and devote their efforts to support of the Allied war effort.

No World Ambition
In view of the step toward disbandment, Stalin was asked what he felt its bearing would be on future international relations.

"The winding up of the Comintern," Stalin wrote, "ends the lie that Moscow allegedly intends to intervene in the life of other nations and Bolshevise them."

"An end is now being put to the calumny of Communist parties in various countries allegedly acting not in the interests of their people, but on order from outside."

The premier said he was confident that dissolution of the international organization would aid prosecution of the war.

Aids War Effort
"The dissolution," he wrote, "was proper and timely because it facilitates organization of a common onslaught by all freedom loving nations against the common enemy—Hitlerism."

It facilitates the work of patriots of all countries for uniting all freedom loving peoples into a single international camp for the fight against world domination by Hitlerism, thus clearing the way for future organization and commerce for peace table signing, it was learned today.

The resolutions for the first inter-Allied parley will follow the pattern established by the mutual aid pacts and represent the initial step in establishing a new world economy based on the following:

Virginia Farmers Heed Food Plea; Now Unable To Preserve Produce

HOT SPRINGS, Va., May 29—The cry for expanded production voiced at the International Food Conference had a "kick-back" today from some 2,000 Virginia mountain farmers toiling within earshot of the historic meeting.

The farmers' complaint, voiced through the manager of their five county "cooperative," was that after answering government pleas for greater food production, they are now unable to obtain the necessary dehydrators with which to preserve the crops.

The War Production Board said M. R. Seabrooke who heads the "co-op" serving Bath, Alleghany, Rockbridge, Augusta and Highland counties, now says the family size dehydrators for drying farm produce will not be available till mid-August or September.

"And that," said Seabrooke, "will be too late."

The slim young co-op manager wryly observed:

"This doesn't apply only to our small area. It affects very section of the nation which has about 800 co-ops all doing the same thing."

"Doesn't Make Sense"
"For two years all we've heard is 'increase production.' Now, with the stuff on hand, we're told we can't get the dehydrators even (Continued on Page Two)

TERRIFIC BLOW DELIVERED ON LEGHORN HARBOR

YANKS ADVANCE ON ATTU

French Invasion Coast Blasted—Berlin Admits Reds Move Ahead

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, May 29—Fighting above the cloudline, United States forces on Attu island in the Aleutians have captured important Fish-hook ridge from the Japanese and have forced the enemy to retreat to new positions, the navy announced today.

Only remaining strongpoint on Attu held by the Japanese forces is an area three to four square miles northwest and north of Chichagof Harbor.

By International News Service
In the longest bombing flight yet made from North African bases, nearly 100 Flying Fortress of Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's strategic air force have carried out a terrific attack on the great harbor of Leghorn, site of the Italian naval academy, an official communique disclosed today.

The big Boeing B-17s made the trip entirely unescorted. Ten enemy planes arose to intercept the raid, but one of them was shot down and the operation carried out according to plan.

Hits were scored on three ships in the harbor, the third largest in Italy. An oil refinery, railway lines and a shipyard also were blasted. Smoke columns rising from the wreckage were visible for 100 miles.

Fires broke out all over the dock and industrial areas. Two heavy explosions at the Leghorn oil refinery were followed by four smaller detonations. Reconnaissance photographs showed six major conflagrations.

Fires Started
Within a few seconds after the raid began, the smoke pall became so thick that further observation was impossible. But devastation in the railway and dock area was described by returning pilots as the most extensive they had ever seen. Many bombs were seen to fall into shipbuilding yards.

Some hours later, Marauder bombers escorted by P-40 Warhawks attacked the big Milo island near Trapani on the island of Sicily. Bombs were dropped among aircraft parked on the ground and three out of 20 German and Italian fighters which challenged the raiders in the air were shot down.

A total of 19 enemy aircraft was destroyed during yesterday's operations, while two additional ones were disposed of the night before. Two Allied aircraft are missing from all operations.

In addition to the attack on Leghorn, there were new attacks by Wellington bombers on enemy airfields on the island of Sardinia. The Sicilian airfield of Castel Vetranò also was attacked, as was the heavily-battered small island of Pantelleria.

French Coast Hit
Fresh blows were being struck by daylight today against the invasion coast of France after a night of feverish activity in the channel area opposite Kent, England.

Strong forces of Allied aircraft set out toward Boulogne to maintain hammering assaults against the Nazis while Cairo announced that American and British planes battered Italy anew.

The rising crescendo of Allied aerial assaults on western and southern areas of the continent was accompanied by mounting fears throughout Europe that the promised invasion may be near at hand.

Not knowing where a possible blow may fall, the Axis was reported working overtime to place stop-gaps at every point they believe might come under assault.

Axis Has Jitters

NOW, NOW UNCLE SAM! THAT IS GOING TOO FAR

GREENBELT, Md., May 29—Tenants of the federal housing project at Greenbelt today were a little perturbed over a seemingly innocent little phrase in their new leases.

"The tenant agrees," reads the clause, "to notify the government of any change in the composition of his household. Additional members shall not be permitted occupancy of the premises except with the written permission of the government."

Greenbelt residents were wondering if their government landlord was warning that if they want to have babies, they must first seek federal permission.

Unofficial authorities on law said that the phrase was only meant to keep distant relatives or others from visiting for a year or two. They said that while the language may seem strange, since it is in the lease all the tenant has to do is to inform the government of any change in his household.

One perturbed tenant asked, "What would happen if I got the go ahead from the housing administration on having a baby and then my wife had twins?"

A specially designed Roll of Honor flag, presented to the Pickaway county Second War Loan Drive committee by the federal government, was placed in the window of The Circleville Herald office Saturday where it will remain over the Memorial Day holiday.

The pennant was received Saturday by Clark Will, chairman of the campaign, from John H. McCoy, chairman of the Federal Reserve district.

Pickaway county is honored for having gone 22 percent above its goal of $1,611,000 in the War Loan campaign which was conducted during April.

YANKS ADVANCE ON ATTU

French Invasion Coast Blasted—Berlin Admits Reds Move Ahead

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, May 29—Fighting above the cloudline, United States forces on Attu island in the Aleutians have captured important Fish-hook ridge from the Japanese and have forced the enemy to retreat to new positions, the navy announced today.

Only remaining strongpoint on Attu held by the Japanese forces is an area three to four square miles northwest and north of Chichagof Harbor.

By International News Service

In the longest bombing flight yet made from North African bases, nearly 100 Flying Fortress of Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle's strategic air force have carried out a terrific attack on the great harbor of Leghorn, site of the Italian naval academy, an official communique disclosed today.

The big Boeing B-17s made the trip entirely unescorted. Ten enemy planes arose to intercept the raid, but one of them was shot down and the operation carried out according to plan.

Hits were scored on three ships in the harbor, the third largest in Italy. An oil refinery, railway lines and a shipyard also were blasted. Smoke columns rising from the wreckage were visible for 100 miles.

Fires broke out all over the dock and industrial areas. Two heavy explosions at the Leghorn oil refinery were followed by four smaller detonations. Reconnaissance photographs showed six major conflagrations.

Fires Started

Within a few seconds after the raid began, the smoke pall became so thick that further observation was impossible. But devastation in the railway and dock area was described by returning pilots as the most extensive they had ever seen. Many bombs were seen to fall into shipbuilding yards.

Some hours later, Marauder bombers escorted by P-40 Warhawks attacked the big Milo airfield near Trapani on the island of Sicily. Bombs were dropped among aircraft parked on the ground and three out of 20 German and Italian fighters which challenged the raiders in the air were shot down.

A total of 19 enemy aircraft was destroyed during yesterday's operations, while two additional ones were disposed of the night before. Two Allied aircraft are missing from all operations.

In addition to the attack on Leghorn, there were new attacks by Wellington bombers on enemy airfields on the island of Sardinia. The Sicilian airfield of Castel Vetranò also was attacked, as was the heavily-battered small island of Pantelleria.

French Coast Hit

Fresh blows were being struck by daylight today against the invasion coast of France after a night of feverish activity in the channel area opposite Kent, England.

Strong forces of Allied aircraft set out toward Boulogne to maintain hammering assaults against the Nazis while Cairo announced that American and British planes battered Italy anew.

The rising crescendo of Allied aerial assaults on western and southern areas of the continent was accompanied by mounting fears throughout Europe that the promised invasion may be near at hand.

Not knowing where a possible blow may fall, the Axis was reported working overtime to place stop-gaps at every point they believe might come under assault.

Axis Has Jitters

Reuters, summing up the new wave of Axis invasion jitters, said that the enemy is giving particular attention to the Channel (Continued on Page Two) lar attention to the Balkans and the Mediterranean. According to one report Hitler sent guns from the French Maginot line and set them up on the Adriatic coast of Greece.

Coast residents of Kent said that explosions and gunfire continued at intervals throughout the night and the activity caused them more uneasiness than they have experienced in several months.

The air ministry said that planes of the fleet air arm and ships of the fighter command had attacked 12 fast German motor boats off the Cherbourg peninsula. Six were sunk and three damaged. Bomber command planes engaged in the mining of enemy waters.

Berlin reported a fight in the channel off Dunkirk between British and German vessels, but no announcement of the clash as yet has been made by the admiralty.

The Nazis asserted that the British craft involved in the channel engagement were "motor transport boats." They claimed that one was sunk and a second set afire. Only one of their craft was damaged, the Germans contended, and it was said to have been able to return to base with other Nazi vessels.

Italians Fearful

The Italians fear that their mainland or nearby islands in the Mediterranean will be the first to be invaded.

"An invasion, at least against Italian islands, may be a matter of days at most," one Italian military commentator was quoted as stating in a Rome broadcast reported to the London Evening Standard.

The uninvited Italians were given new cause for concern when heavy United States bombers struck a telling blow at the Foggia airbase in eastern Italy, and RAF bombers from the Middle East again battered Augusta, Sicily.

In the raid on Foggia, which is situated on the ankle of the Italian boot, the American bombers destroyed grounded aircraft and started fires among hangars. Targets of the RAF bombing included the railroad station at Augusta and nearby oil installations.

Sea Operation Looms

The naval expert of the London News Chronicle came forth today with a statement which should spread further disquiet in the Axis camp. He said that the greatest naval operations in history are imminent and declared that they would result in the landing and maintenance of an allied army in Europe.

The Russians and Germans remained locked in battle in the Kuban valley of the West Caucasus but there was little official word on what Berlin claims is a continuing Soviet offensive.

The Red army high command said only that fighting was going on northeast of the Black sea naval base of Novorossisk but Axis broadcasts said that Russian infantry had smashed forward at some points to the main German defense line where hand-to-hand fighting was in progress.

BASS SEASON IN SOUTH OPENS NEXT TUESDAY

Circleville and Pickaway county fishermen are all set for black bass fishing with the season opening next Tuesday in the southern part of the state. Opening date in the northern area is June 16.

The legal length on black bass is 10 inches and the daily bag limit is six.

The early Spring fishing got off to a good start in Ohio and Buckeye fishermen are hoping that from now on the weather man, who brought rain and cold weather for the greater part of May while they were attempting to catch other species while the ban was on bass, will favor them with good weather for all kinds of fishing, including the wily bass.

The taking of frogs in all waters and turtles in streams was prohibited at the same time as black bass, so that the opening of the season on frogs and turtles will coincide with the opening of the black bass season in each of the two Ohio bass zones. The dividing line of the two bass zones is a line formed by Route No. 35 from the Indiana state line to Chillicothe; Route No. 50 from Chillicothe to Athens and Alternate No. 50 (Northern Route) from Athens to Marietta.

Virginia Farmers Heed Food Plea; Now Unable To Preserve Produce

though the simplest type would use only four or five pounds of critical materials. It doesn't make sense.

Gardening in the Hot Springs area where the postwar food problems are being settled has been boosted 50 percent as the result of the federal appeals for "more food," he added.

"Now he's out the window too," Seabrooke said he already has orders on hand for 25 or 30 small dehydrators. One bushel of beans, he pointed out, requires 24 quart jars and valuable rubber washers under the pressure cooking method of preserving, while the same quantity after dehydration can be stored in a half gallon jar.

The simpler dehydrators, he said, are made of plywood, their only critical metals going into the fans and thermostats.

"Throughout the country, hundreds of tons of food will be wasted if the small farmers don't get these dehydrators after being prepared for them," Seabrooke stressed. He added:

"I'm going to get them if there's a cow in Texas—somehow. What some people don't realize is that while the farmers are glad to produce more for national security, they aren't going to be booted around forever. And if anybody goes hungry as a result, it will be the city fellows."

For old pressure cooking partisans, including any who might be sitting in on the food conference down the valley, Seabrooke wanted them to know that dehydration is easier on the housewife. All she has to do in storing the dried vegetables when they come from the dehydrator is drop them in a cellophane bag and "seal the ends of the bag with a warm iron."

In case any of the United Nations nutrition experts are interested, he particularly emphasized: "Just a warm iron."

While recommendations solving production and distribution problems in the period immediately following the war have been clear-cut and comparatively easily arrived at, the long-term planning which dovetails into "the new world charter" has been complex and warily approached.

"Sooner or later the real world economic problem of production and distribution will have to be faced — it is the absolute basis for international collaboration," members of the resolution section said.

"Countries appreciate slowly, even with reluctance, their enlightened interest in the economic field."

"Vested interests" delegates drafting the solutions said, encourage "short-sightedness" and fight the idea of a community of nations with common interests and goals. "The habit of regarding trade as a species of warfare in which each country battles for the advantage" will not be broken by this conference, it was said, but the international meeting has made the first step in scrapping "The predatory trade formula" and establishing "a new economic order of free trade channels and mutual aid."

300 REGISTER TO CONTRIBUTE TO BLOOD BANK

With more than 300 persons registered to donate a pint of blood each to help swell the Red Cross blood bank, all details were reported Saturday to be completed for the visit of the Franklin county Red Cross mobile unit here Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. A. Hulise Hays, registrar for the Red Cross, said Saturday that the goal has been passed and that, barring any unforeseen cancellations, at least 300 pints of blood will be taken away from Circleville Tuesday evening when the mobile unit goes back to Columbus.

Of the 300 who will donate blood almost 200 are persons who gave a pint of blood in March when the unit made its first visit here. The mobile unit will be stationed at the First Methodist church, where a complete headquarters has been set up. All persons giving blood will be given examinations before they are permitted to make their donations. A nutrition kitchen has been set up, and all arrangements have been completed to make the event a big one.

Blood taken here will be sent to a processing center where it will be made into plasma to be sent to the various theatres of war.

The unit will be in operation from noon until 4:45 p. m. Monday and from 9:45 a. m. to 3 p. m. Tuesday, all times being Central War Time.

conference, now planning the strategy for a conquest of worldwide hunger and want, will come the first outlines of postwar banking and investment on an international scale, a program of credit extension to allow "elbow room" for reconstruction and a plan to bring the world together in an "economic community of nations with common interests."

The first step to establish the "new world charter" based on mutual aid will come immediately after the war with the enforcement of universal rationing in order to drive back starvation, disease and death. All nations represented at the international food conference are in wholehearted agreement with the proposal to expand agricultural production to the utmost and share the burden of feeding war-ravaged countries.

Spokesmen for the conference section now drafting the recommendation admitted this would mean greater sacrifice for some countries, such as the United States, Great Britain, the Dominions and Latin American members of the United Nations, than for others. Rationing, the committee members said, will not only have to be continued and probably increased in both the United States and the United Kingdom, but introduced in most others to achieve fair distribution of available supplies.

A shipping shortage is also taken into account by the conference and a system of pooling will be recommended.

F.D.R. MAY LET TAX MEASURE GO WITHOUT A NAME

WASHINGTON, May 29—Congressional tax leaders today believed that President Roosevelt will allow the new pay-as-you-go tax bill to become law because of the attitude that a veto would result in complete abandonment of such legislation.

It was disclosed that influential senate and house members have informed the treasury that the compromise 75 percent forgiveness bill is all that the administration can get and that unless it is accepted there will be no pay-as-you-go tax plan, now or hereafter.

early next week, tax leaders in the two branches are now turning their attention to a general revenue bill which is slated to follow the collection-at-the-source measure.

Increased administration pressure for higher taxes, particularly on individual incomes, is generally expected if the new tax bill, which is estimated to yield about $5,000,000,000, becomes law. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has said that $16,000,000,000 in additional revenue for the next fiscal year will be "very badly needed."

It is expected that the administration's demands for this huge sum will result in a strong drive for enactment of a general sales tax which is opposed by President Roosevelt.

SENATORS RAP LOCAL PARADE FOOD SUBSIDY TO BE FEATURE OF CELEBRATION

into the real life of America this false doctrine of subsidies," Smith said.

While saying that subsidies are useful to some degree, Davis declared that prevention of inflation requires more. He said that more money must be taken from the people in purchases of bonds or taxes—perhaps a 30 percent withholding tax—in order to whittle down $18,000,000,000 of "free" purchasing power.

Smith charged that the subsidy program is based on keeping up prices for the big processors, but does not reach the problem of the small business man or farmer.

"The marginal producer will be put out of business by this 'roll back,'" he said. "They take care of the big man and the little fellow is going out of business."

"The rank and file of the American people are demoralized. They are not going to risk their time and money unless they know they will get a return.

"If they could control the seasons, they'd be right."

"We have little bits of men, who never made a living, running the government. They look more to their own interest than that of the government."

The Davis theory of mopping up purchasing power by heavier taxation and forced savings also aroused Smith's ire.

"They want to take $18,000,000,000 in taxes or bonds from the populace to keep down inflation," he said. "I hope the American people, when they say you can't buy what you want, will say 'we thought we ran the government.'"

The subsidy issue is expected to head toward a shutdown soon with a request from Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones for a $5,000,000,000 increase in the borrowing power of Reconstruction Finance Corporation so that subsidies can be paid.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Pointers on Picking Beans in the Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

TO PICK OR not to pick is often a question which perplexes the Victory gardener whose mouth waters for a mess of home-grown beans. Often through neglect or from lack of knowledge the Victory gardener will fail to pick beans when they are at their best stage of development insofar as flavor and tenderness is concerned.

Lima beans, for example, are at their very best if they are picked while still young and green, even though small, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. When the pods begin to turn yellow the beans are past their best stage of development and from this point on it is best to permit them to ripen on the vine for use during the winter months.

Another pointer to remember is that the flavor and quality of lima beans is especially fine if they are eaten as soon after picking as it is possible to prepare them for the table.

String beans, unless eaten when young, will usually be found to have become tough, stringy and lacking in their real flavor. String beans should be picked before the beans inside the pod have begun to swell, and while the beans, as illustrated, are still streamlined. At this stage they snap easily.

Pole beans must be picked continuously to assure the vines producing all through the season. If the beans are neglected and are allowed to dry on the vines the plants stop producing.

The first step to establish the "new world charter" based on mutual aid will come immediately after the war with the enforcement of universal rationing in order to drive back starvation, disease and death. All nations represented at the international food conference are in wholehearted agreement with the proposal to expand agricultural production to the utmost and share the burden of feeding war-ravaged countries.

Spokesmen for the conference section now drafting the recommendation admitted this would mean greater sacrifice for some countries, such as the United States, Great Britain, the Dominions and Latin American members of the United Nations, than for others. Rationing, the committee members said, will not only have to be continued and probably increased in both the United States and the United Kingdom, but introduced in most others to achieve fair distribution of available supplies.

A shipping shortage is also taken into account by the conference and a system of pooling will be recommended.

While recommendations solving production and distribution problems in the period immediately following the war have been cleared out and comparatively easily arrived at, the long-term planning which dovetails into "the new world charter" has been complex and warily approached.

"Sooner or later the real world economic problem of production and distribution will have to be faced — it is the absolute basis for international collaboration," members of the resolution section said.

"Countries appreciate slowly, even with reluctance, their enlightened interest in the economic field."

"Vested interests," delegates drafting the solutions said, encourage "short-sightedness" and fight the idea of a community of nations with common interests and goals. "The habit of regarding trade as a species of warfare in which each country battles for the advantage" will not be broken by this conference, it was said, but the international meeting has made the first step in scrapping "The predatory trade formula" and establishing "a new economic order of free trade channels and mutual aid."

F.D.R. MAY LET
TAX MEASURE GO
WITHOUT A NAME

WASHINGTON, May 29—Congressional tax leaders today believed that President Roosevelt will allow the new pay-as-you-go tax bill to become law because of the attitude that a veto would result in complete abandonment of such legislation.

It was disclosed that influential senate and house members have informed the treasury that the compromise 75 percent foregone-ness is all that the administration can get and that unless it is accepted there will be no pay-as-you-go tax plan, now or hereafter.

With the bill scheduled for final approval by the senate and house

Private Clifford Kerns, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kerns, is at Fort Hayes, Columbus, prior to being assigned to service. Kerns, who was home Thursday evening to visit his parents, was a member of the reserve enrolled in school at Otterbein college, Westerville.

Mack Young, son of Mason Young, has gone to Cincinnati to begin training in the U. S. Merchant Marine. Young is a member of the Circleville high school freshman class. He was accepted early in the week and was called to Cincinnati only a day or two after his physical examination was completed.

early next week, tax leaders in the two branches are now turning their attention to a general revenue bill which is slated to follow the collection-at-the-source measure.

Increased administration pressure for higher taxes, particularly on individual incomes, is generally expected if the new tax bill, which is estimated to yield about $3,000,000,000, becomes law. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has said that $16,000,000,000 in additional revenue for the next fiscal year will be "very badly needed."

It is expected that the administration's demands for this huge sum will result in a strong drive for enactment of a general sales tax which is opposed by President Roosevelt.

into the real life of America this false doctrine of subsidies," Smith said.

While saying that subsidies are useful to some degree, Davis declared that prevention of inflation requires more. He said that more money must be taken from the people in purchases of bonds or taxes—perhaps a 30 percent withholding tax—in order to whittle down $18,000,000,000 of "free" purchasing power.

Smith charged that the subsidy program is based on keeping up prices for the big processors, but does not reach the problem of the small business man or farmer.

"The marginal producer will be put out of business by this 'roll back,'" he said. "They take care of the big man and the little fellow is going out of business."

"The rank and file of the American people are demoralized. They are not going to risk their time and money unless they know they will get a return."

"If they could control the seasons they'd be right."

"We have little bits of men, who never made a living, running the government. They look more to their own interest than that of the government."

The Davis theory of mopping up purchasing power by heavier taxation and forced savings also aroused Smith's ire.

"They want to take $18,000,000,000 in taxes or bonds from the populace to keep down inflation," he said. "I hope the American people, when they say you can't buy what you want, will say 'we thought we ran the government.'"

The subsidy issue is expected to head toward a shutdown soon with a request from Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones for a $5,000,000,000 increase in the borrowing power of Reconstruction Finance Corporation so that subsidies can be paid.

FIRST UNITS OF WAACS AWAITED AT LOCKBOURNE

Barracks have been provided for 150 members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps and Lockbourne army air base is awaiting the arrival of the first WAACS assigned to serve the base.

Captain Joseph Schroeder, public officer at the station, said Lockbourne has not yet been informed how many WAACS will be sent there, but preparations are being made for as many as 150 with quarters also set up for three officers.

Four buildings, two barracks, each of which will accommodate 75 women, an administration building and a mess hall, are set aside at the northwest corner of the station.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Pointers on Picking Beans in the Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

TO PICK OR not to pick is often a question which perplexes the Victory gardener whose mouth waters for a mess of home-grown beans. Often through neglect or from lack of knowledge the Victory gardener will fail to pick beans when they are at their best stage of development insofar as flavor and tenderness is concerned.

Lima beans, for example, are at their very best if they are picked while still young and green, even though small, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. When the pods begin to turn yellow the beans are past their best stage of development and from this point on it is best to permit them to ripen on the vine for use during the winter months.

Another point to remember is that the flavor and quality of lima beans is especially fine if they are eaten as soon after picking as it is possible to prepare them for the table.

String beans, unless eaten when young, will usually be found to have become tough, stringy and lacking in their real flavor. String beans should be picked before the beans inside the pod have begun to swell, and while the beans, as illustrated, are still streamlined. At this stage they snap easily.

Pole beans must be picked continuously to assure the vines producing all through the season. If the beans are neglected and are allowed to dry on the vines the plants stop producing.

BLACKOUT THOUGHTS

THERE is something to be said for blackouts, even in American areas where it is hardly conceivable that foreign enemies should come to drop bombs. It is the sudden unity into which a whole population is drawn. And with it comes also new understanding of people in far countries who are living, and perhaps have lived for years, under the shadow of real peril.

Turning out the lights at the sound of the warning siren, sitting in the dark room on the dark streets of the dark city, in complete silence, waiting for the sound of bombs which are only imaginary but might be real, what thoughts arise in people's minds? Thought of the millions of people in many countries who have listened in fear for so many nights, and to whom danger is always imminent. Thoughts of the war and how it is fought, and of the men who go to war. Thoughts of the future of families and nations, and of the world itself, and what will become of everybody if these wars continue long.

They are sad thoughts, but often fruitful. If the nations could have thought so soberly and understandingly, before the wars came, would they ever have begun? Would even Hitler and Mussolini and Tojo have dared to start them?

THE LATE MRS. TAFT

MRS. William Howard Taft, widow of the former President, who has died at 81, had the cup of happiness dashed from her lips almost as soon as it was presented.

Her great ambition had been to see her husband in the White House. Left to himself, Mr. Taft would have accepted the appointment to the Supreme Court that was several times offered him by President Theodore Roosevelt. He was not left to himself. Mrs. Taft fulfilled the function which some wives assume, that of making good their husband's lack of ambition.

She had her way. Her husband became President, and she the First Lady of the Land. As such, she prepared for an active life. Never, according to the reminiscences later published by "Ike" Hoover, for over 40 years chief usher at the White House, has any President's wife decreed more drastic housekeeping changes than Mrs. Taft. She even insisted on being present at the President's conferences. Yet within two months she broke down physically, was unable to take part in much of the activity to which she had looked forward, and never entirely recovered.

Perhaps her husband's later appointment as Chief Justice, making him the only ex-President to hold that position assuaged her. Her earlier disappointment had been so great that no one could begrudge her what happiness she was finally able to get from life.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

BLOW UP IN OPA OFFICE

WASHINGTON — Friends of tough, turbulent Leon Henderson say that when he came back from his Mexican vacation he went to the Russian restaurant Troika for an evening of entertainment and, as he emerged, bumped into a group of pals from his old Office of Price Administration.

Among them was Lou Maxon, the Detroit advertising magnate who has brought "new blood" into the OPA since Henderson's departure. Leon had never met Maxon, and as they were introduced, he said:

"Gee, Lou, I'm glad to meet you. It took me a year and a half to become the country's greatest so-and-so. But you've done it in six weeks!"

The incident is symbolic of the rising tempers inside the Office which faces the most difficult domestic job of the war — fixing prices and rationing everyday necessities. The fight has become so hot that nobody can predict exactly what will happen to the OPA. It will have to get tough and cut out its internal feuding, or it is finished.

Basic issue involved is whether prices should be increased to give the food processor, the food wholesaler and the retailer a better chance or whether prices should be held down to satisfy labor. Fundamentally the question is whether we will or will not have inflation; also whether prices can be kept down by the honor system, or must be enforced by police.

THE PRICE BATTLERS

Here are the leaders in the OPA civil war:

Lou Maxon, high powered, likeable Detroit advertising genius, imported by Prentiss Brown to tone down some of Henderson's toughness; looks like a minor league short-stop who has put on weight, with a rear view much like waddling Leon Henderson, but front view revealing no bay-window.

Most people like Lou, especially those in the business world. They like his idea of throwing away the policeman's billy to enforce price ceilings, also his more liberal ideas on prices.

But among those who definitely do not like Maxon is the leader of the old Leon Henderson camp, J. Kenneth Galbraith, Deputy Administrator in Charge of Prices. Galbraith is so tall he appears to walk on stilts. Born at Iona Station, Ontario, Galbraith was educated at Cambridge, England, has the deliberate speech of an academician, the casual, tousled-hair manner of a precocious boy.

For the last four years, however, he has been an important economic adviser to the National Defense Council, then with OPA. Behind his youthful casual exterior, Galbraith can be tough, and he has been plenty tough in fighting Maxon.

Chief higher-price advocate, goading Maxon from the rear has been Charles H. Fleischer, of the A and P stores, who last week got fed up with the fight and resigned. He advocated a new system of "floating ceilings" permitting higher prices, arguing that the food industry was being squeezed between low price ceilings and the higher cost of food production.

Vigorously opposing him have been: Richard Gilbert, former Harvard economics instructor, now director of OPA's

Dyspepsia Is Effect Not Cause of Nerves

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IT NEEDS only a superficial review in your memory of those of your friends who are "dyspeptics" to realize that they are of a nervous, high-strung temperament, or else of a moody, sour disposition. It is natural to assume that they are that way because they have dyspepsia, but it would be much more accurate, to say that they have dyspepsia on account of their nerves.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Even dyspepsia due to organic disease of the stomach, such as ulcer, may fall into this class. We certainly do not know all the causes of ulcer, but it is notable that the victims tend to have a nervous disposition, and a stomach ulcer gets active under tension and stress.

We might expect that war would have an effect on such cases, and there are plenty of records to show that such is indeed the case. England, having been in the war longer than we have, has the most complete set of case histories. Many men were invalided home from the British Expeditionary Force. In one convoy of 238 men, 23 per cent were suffering from acute stomach ulcer, or from flare-ups of old, supposedly healed ulcers.

Later Report

In a more comprehensive, later report it was recorded that in 15 per cent of all men invalided home, the cause was some form of dyspepsia, real or nervous in type. So burdensome did the situation become that it was debated whether a history of dyspepsia, existing over any length of time, would not be a cause for rejection for active duty.

An illuminating experience is that of London hospitals during air raids. The average number of cases of perforated ulcer per month in 1937, when all was relatively calm, was 20. During September and October, 1940, the first two months of heavy bombing, the rate rose to 80 per month. "The probable cause of the increase was anxiety," reads the report in the Lancet.

Lawson Hospital Report

The United States Army has had an equally serious experience, even though the troops had not been under gun fire. In the Lawson General Hospital (an Army institution) 9 per cent of the patients admitted from August 1, 1941, to May 1, 1942, were suffering from digestive disturbances—mostly ulcer or irritable colon. Major Donald Chamberlain, who makes the report, concludes: "The man with peptic ulcer is unfit for military service."

Nerves is generally given as the main cause, but of course Army food may play a role. "The Army diet is good, well prepared, well balanced, and far better in quality and quantity than the diets that have ever had in their lives," writes Major Chamberlain. "However it is not a diet designed for special needs"—i. e., dyspepsia and ulcer.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

P. J. L.—Is there any cure for hysteria, and if so, what?

Answer: Doctors interested in psychological medicine have good results with psychic treatment.

R. H. W.—What is undulant fever? Is it contagious? Does anyone ever get over it?

Answer: Undulant fever is a chronic infection, something like typhoid fever, which is spread by contaminated milk. Although it often lasts a long time, complete recovery is the rule in most cases.

P. M. I.—Is it possible for bad teeth, such as in pyorrhea, to cause a stroke, or rheumatic heart, or both?

Answer: There is considerable difference of opinion on this subject. It seems likely that there is more possibility of focal infection of this kind lighting in the heart muscle than of causing a stroke, but both, I believe, are possible.

V. S.—If food doesn't cause high blood pressure, what does?

Answer: This is a firm, direct question, and I will answer it with equal finality—"I don't know what causes high blood pressure and neither does anybody else on earth." Perhaps the answer is contained in what an old colored lady told me once when I asked why her blood pressure was so low. "When I sits," she explained, "I sits loose, and when I starts to worry, I falls asleep." The reason food can't be blamed is that in a group of people who have been eating the same food all their lives, some have high blood pressure, some do not.

SYNOPSIS

Notified that her brother, MELVIN MARSDEN, is missing in action, JEAN MARSDEN, who has risen to the top as a fashion model, quits her job to become secretary to STEVE LANDIS, director of a new rubber plant in Mexico. Jean has an abrupt introduction to caffeine, hand-some CURLEY, employed by MR. AND MRS. PARKINSON, owners of the Rancho Casolina. Jean appears to have roused the jealousy of ROSITA, a pretty little Mexican girl who is in love with Curley.

YESTERDAY: Curley gives Jean a silver bracelet in exchange for a kiss.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

THE NEXT morning the doors of the rubber company opened to receive the mass of unskilled workers. To Steve and Jean, this, their long anticipated milestone, had been reached two days ahead of Steve's original schedule. It meant actual work was about to begin.

At seven, a few of the really energetic Mexican souls had arrived, black hair slicked with oil, grinning with affability and excitement, to sit patiently on the ground at the front gate.

Both Steve and Jean were in the enormous, newly furnished personnel room at 9 o'clock when the stream of applicants was finally started through the process of signing up. A flood of jubilant Spanish chattering continued uninterruptedly. Wild tears sometimes followed a rejection. And much back clapping and loud "Vivas!" accompanied the final triumph of a successful applicant.

As the workers were sent to the various departments, inevitable adjustments had to be made in organization and equipment. Steve was in almost constant conference with department heads. And on Jean's shoulders fell a great deal of the work once taken care of by him. She had thought they had rushed before, but now, under the strained speed and added responsibility, all previous weeks seemed periods of golden leisure.

She was glad, though, of this feverish activity in more ways than one. Steve's spirits were rising buoyantly each day nearer his goal of a complete factory personnel. He had a definite sense of individual responsibility toward the total war effort. The rubber production was an important opportunity to fulfill his obligation of loyalty to his country, and he was making the most of it, with an urgency that rose above all obstacles.

Jean was glad also for the rush because it gave her no chance to dwell upon her last ride with Curley, to ponder his strange words that had followed that brief disturbing kiss. "No matter what happens, . . . no matter what I do . . . I'll always feel the same way about you." His black eyes had burned with a flame of serious intensity, for that one swift moment. Hadn't they? Or had she been duped by her racing pulse, her breathless desire to believe she had glimpsed an inner core of balance in him? Certainly when he escorted her to her door, he had been his old, carefree, light-hearted self.

She slid a sheaf of carbonated memo slips into her typewriter and dated it. Probably, she told herself grimly, Curley was at this minute teasing the lovely Rosita. Using his swaggering, cruel technique that she loved. After all, Rosita was far more his type—seeing life as a romantic, make-believe place, with flirting and love the only important activities. Curley poked fun at her, but he was attracted by her, too. He would always go after her when she grew too angry—as he had at dinner that night.

Steve appeared in his office door, and crossed to read the memo over her shoulder.

"Department Heads: There will be a meeting of department heads in the conference room at eight tomorrow morning."

"S. LANDIS."

"Do you realize what that means?"

She raced through the last "General Manager," and then returned his jubilant grin. "It means—the machines start rolling tomorrow."

"And we'll be making real rubber for the first time," Steve answered. "Real, live rubber, as Manzanares would say. Oh, there's another memo. Tell Howard, James, Martin and Brower to come up here this noon."

Jean groaned. "And send up your lunch. Why don't you try eating some noon without a conference? You might live longer."

Steve's eyes softened, focused on her, in sudden appreciation of her sea-green frock that brought out the creamy tan of her lovely skin, and the golden lights in her high-swept hair. "I like solitude even if I don't seem to need the advice," he said quietly. "When things get under control around here, I'm going to take time out for a lot of things—including making your acquaintance."

"We'll go for that ride you arranged for the first Sunday?" teased Jean.

"Yes," said Steve. "A useful note came into his voice. 'The one where you met Curley. By the way, you didn't hear anything of interest while you were at the rancho, by any chance?'"

Jean stiffened. "Of course not. I wasn't aware," she added coldly, "that I was out there as a spy."

"You weren't, only—" He was regarding her with quizzical surprise. He suddenly gathered up the memos and rang for a messenger. "I'm sorry I mentioned it," he said coolly, as he turned to go.

But, at that minute, the door burst open and Manzanares, bristling with medals and importance, waded in. "Buenos dias!" he called cheerily. He bowed to Jean, and tweaked one corner of his mustache as he beamed on her. "You are looking even more radiant than usual, senorita!"

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs was the theme used in the banquet decorations for the annual junior-senior banquet of Circleville high school held in Memorial hall.

"Thank you," said Jean stiffly.

"And she's been working even harder," Steve was explaining her previous anger and silently apologizing to her for his questioning. But Jean was still too embarrassed to show her gratitude. She wished violently they would both go on into Steve's office. Steve was already holding his door open, but the chief of police still lingered. In sudden dismay, she realized his gaze was fastened on her arm.

"A beautiful bracelet," he was saying. His gleaming eyes were narrowed awfully. "It is from Penzance's place in Mexico City—the only silversmith in Mexico who does that work. You got it recently?"

To her annoyance, Jean felt her face flame. "Yes," she said.

Steve's voice cut in with sudden harsh impatience. "Shall we go into my office, Manzanares?"

"Yes," certainly," beamed the chief of police. "If Miss Marsden will accompany us. I should like to ask her several questions."

Silently, Jean followed them. Manzanares seemed unaware of the strained atmosphere as he launched happily into his story. "We have just received word from Mexico City this morning of some meetings of the police have been suspecting. One was held in old theater last week. It was the same time as Mr. Parkinson was gone on his trip."

"I see," said Steve sharply. "So we will keep our eyes on him very sharp after this," beamed the chief.

"I don't like the idea of that plane of his buzzing around," said Steve.

"It will be grounded because of the defense area here," Manzanares assured them. "The plane suddenly snapped. She glared at the little man. "It seems to me that's a very far-fetched coincidence you're basing all this suspicion on," she snapped. She glared at the little man. "If you are so curious about that trip to Mexico City, why don't you two go up and ask the Parkinsons about it? I imagine Mr. Parkinson would be very glad to explain it to you in detail."

She caught up the ringing phone, glad an excuse to get control of herself. It was a girl's voice.

"This is the telephone office. We have a telegram here for Miss Jean Marsden. Is this Miss Marsden?"

"Yes." A panic of premonition sent the blood pounding through Jean's head. Tremblingly she reached for a memo pad on Steve's desk, and took the words of the message in shorthand.

Steve and Manzanares saw the slow pallor creep over her face, the pencil dropped from her hand as she replaced the receiver. Steve moved to her side. "What is it?" he queried gently.

Dully she answered. "My brother in Africa has been located. He is a German prisoner."

Too High Ration Points Cause Waste of Sausage 4,000,000 Pounds Spoiled in Week, Survey Shows

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

FEEDING PERFECTLY good sausages to the nation's sewers, by the millions of tons, seems like a queer way of conserving war-time's food supplies.

To be exact, the sausage so disposed of is not perfectly good. It is spoiled. However, it would have been consumed by human beings before it went bad, instead of being condemned by public health authorities as no longer fit for anything but a sewer to digest, if it had not been for Director Prentiss Brown's Office of Price Administration's prolonged refusal to permit the sale upon terms that the country's housewives have been willing to accept.

The house of representatives' committee on small business dug up the evidence, following complaints from the sausage and casing industries' spokesmen that their trade was going to smash, that 25 to 50 per cent of their workers had lost their jobs and that a number of their weenie-making plants had closed up or were about to do so.

When point-rationing began to be talked about initially, representations were made to officials of both OPA and the agriculture department to the effect that sausage was a very staple article of American diet, especially to tollers who take lunches with them to their places of employment, and an urgent plea was submitted to emergency authority to place no points whatever upon that particular edibility, or, anyway, to keep them as low as possible.

The result was a decree of seven points on sausage, seven on roast beef and eight on sirloin.

On that basis, the housewife promptly elected to take roast beef in preference to sausage and even preferred sirloin at eight points to sausage at seven. She considered either of them a better bargain than the seven-point sausage.

The result was that sausages immediately began to spoil on the retailers' hands. There no longer was an adequate demand for them. The market organization was so obvious that OPA agreed to a one-point sausage reduction, down to six points. The housewife still balked at the lowered sausage figure.

Following the seven to six-point reduction the congressional small business committee conducted a general survey. It ascertained that, in a single recent week, we produced 40,000,000 pounds of sausage, of which 4,000,000 pounds spoiled and had to be dumped down sewers. It struck the committee members as a pretty substantial percentage, and they have been hollering for a good-sized additional cut-down.

OPA Director Prentiss Brown and Chester Davis, his collaborator, had to admit that remedial measures were required.

Latest information (it may have been acted on before these lines can be printed) is that a cut to four sausage points should be imposed by OPA's management. The sausage-makers point, though, is that two points is all they can survive under.

Incidentally, sausage is made from meat trimmings which have not much food value for other purposes.

How much the sausage industry amounts to, industrially and commercially, is testified to by the congressional small business committee's report that 2,000,000,000 pounds of its products were previously sold to the public annually, not counting farm slaughtering.

Yet it isn't alone in an industry that the weenie-makers argue for their merchandise's consideration. They emphasize also that it feeds belligerents.

The thing runs into astronomical reckonings.

Fault is not found by the congressional small business committee on the ground that sausage is running into a famine, due to OPA restrictions.

The yowl is that the whole organization is unintelligent.

The charge is that its restrictions are involving a lot of unnecessary difficulties, troublesome now but likewise due to slop over into the later peace era.

OPA's difficulties certainly won't end with the war. They will continue indefinitely. However, it will be some successor of Director Prentiss Brown who will have to deal with them. Heaven help his successor, in 1944 or a decade or so later.

That is supposed to be of no consequence. Watch, look and listen!

WORLD RECORDS IN JEOPARDY AS STARS COMPETE

LOS ANGELES, May 29 — Three world marks may be swabbed off the record books today as 200 lads from up and down the Pacific coast, and points east, cavort in the Southern California invitational track and field championships at the Los Angeles coliseum.

Speedburners and field artists who have chalked up some of the nation's best marks this season will strut through a 28-event program—easily the country's stiffest trackfest of 1943.

A quartet of baton passers from the University of Missouri — current fastest sprint team in the world at war — will be gunning for new marks in the 440 and half-mile relays.

Roland Sink, an 18-year-old streak of lightning from South Pasadena-high school, will assault the interscholastic mile record. Sink, a certain winner today, busted through a 4.214 last week — better than any college miler has done this year.

Loss of Johnny Allen To Hurt Dodger Drive

NEW YORK, May 29 — The Brooklyn Dodgers' loss of Johnny Allen via the dog-house may not present an insurmountable obstacle to the National league leaders in their quest of the pennant, but the temperamental star will be missed—especially when he is needed.

Too many times before a pitching staff has been just as good as its relievers—or firemen, as they are known—the gents who can go in there and down a conflagration of enemy bats in the pinch and stave off an impending defeat.

Allen had been a big help all season, and had snared three victories as the fireman for predecessors on the mound. The 30-day suspension handed down by League President Ford Frick yesterday will keep him idle until the latter part of June, and could mean a big difference in the Dodgers' chances.

The league-leaders won their ball game yesterday beating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 2 behind Ed Head. That kept them out in front by 1 1/2 games over the St. Louis Cardinals, who downed the Boston Braves, 2 to 1, in 10 innings when Lou Klein drove in Pitcher Max Lanier with a resounding wallop. Making it Klein's 15th hitting game in a row.

The New York Giants beat the Chicago Cubs, 3 to 1, behind Harry Feldman for a clean sweep of the series.

Cincinnati's Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 11 to 8, in a forenoon game, although the Phils drove Johnny Vander Meer to cover with a four-run attack in the first inning.

In the American league, Cleveland beat the Boston Red Sox, 5 to 2 for winners' first win of the year over the near-tailenders. Johnny Salveson hurled the victory, which moved the Indians back into a first place tie with the

PHILLIES OUTBID ALL BUT UNCLE SAM FOR HURLER

PHILADELPHIA, May 29 — The Phils outbid the Athletics, Detroit, Red Sox, Cardinals and Brooklyn to get George L. Eyrich, 18-year-old fireball pitcher of Reading high school, who graduates tonight and joins the Quaker city team in Pittsburgh tomorrow.

However, the baseball teams weren't the only ones interested in the five foot, eight inch imitator of Bob Feller. George is scheduled to take his final army physical examination at the Allentown induction center June 4.

Washington Senators, who were idle.

The New York Yankees—down in third place by a half game—broke a five-game losing streak behind Hank Borowy, beating the Detroit Tigers, 2 to 1. Borowy went the route, but the Yankees were out 8 to 6 and won the game on a break—when Dick Wakefield, the Tigers' $50,000 prospect, dropped Roy Weatherly's outfield fly to lead to the winning run.

Russ Christopher hurled his first win of the year for the Philadelphia Athletics, beating the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 2. It was his third win in a row.

HARMAN SURE TO TAKE BIERMAN JOB AT IOWA

"Spindrift" quoted Capt. David C. Hanrahan, commanding officer, as saying Lt. Comdr. Harman would supervise the school's physical training program and act as coach of the Seahawk football team next fall. He is now director of athletics at Chapel Hill, N. C., preflight.

PHILADELPHIA NO LONGER TO BE SCOFFED AT

Bill Cox And Buck Harris Receive Plaudits For Season's Play

HOME TOWN IS AMAZED

Crowds Entering Through Turnstiles; But Play Is Still Young

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, May 29 — Realizing that the Philadelphia Phillies might at any moment be overcome by an accident, such as a 50-game losing streak, I still think this would be a good time for everybody to stand up and give them three raps and a locomotive. Give it to them, and to Bill Cox, their new owner, and to Bucky Harris, their new manager who was lifted out of the American league as part of the new deal that has made the club artistically and financially successful beyond the wildest dreams of a Philly addict, if any.

This was the club that struggled and floundered and finally came to be a mild disgrace and a perpetual problem to the National league until this season. It was the club that rival teams welcomed at all times as the one on which the standing (of the rival) and rival batting averages could be fattened on. It was a thing dished in baseball, loathed almost beyond words by the others.

Through the years, season after season, it gradually had become more lowly until finally reluctant league officials belatedly had to do something about it, and suddenly took over for resale.

Cox In Big Gamble
Bill Cox took about as big a gamble as any man ever to enter the game. Getting a franchise the old days implied a willingness to lose money if necessary and perhaps go bankrupt eventually, but that was as nothing compared with what Cox acquired and what he has converted into a pretty good imitation of a free-wheeling gold mine.

The thing has reached the point where baseball no longer must hide its face when the Phils are mentioned. They belong and no longer are the family shame to be hidden away behind excuses and pretense.

This brings up the point that major league baseball, for all its seeming savvy as a first line industry, can be stupider than moving. They should have acted years sooner in spite of all the hollow sanctity of a franchise. The Phils were so bad actually before the league stepped in and unloaded them on Bill Cox that they were a threat to the game.

He knew that Bucky Harris undoubtedly was cognizant of the baseball facts of life when he went there as manager, but somehow they seemed to have perceived that they had a chance to go places in these war times and build on that foundation for the future. So there they stand. They've played 500 ball so far, a modern world record for the Phils—and they have made the turnstiles hum with customers to the point where Cox reportedly now is considering buying an oil company to supply those turnstiles with lubrication.

143,004 At Home

During their last home stand the Phils played to 143,004 spectators, including a sellout to their last home double-header. They are an attraction on the road as well—not great ball players, but hustling ball players who are so far improved over the Phils of the Gerry Nugent regime that apologies no longer are necessary.

Bill Cox has instituted a number of innovations, including paid ads in the Philadelphia newspapers asking fans for suggestions, thanking them for their support and promising them further living of a club that was dead as a dodo when the current season started.

For too long baseball looked on the Phils as something that should be remedied but hardly worth it. The war made necessary a strengthening of the baseball front and out of this has come the renaissance which threatens last.

No matter what they may do from here on, they at least have proved that good baseball need not remain foreign to Philadelphia indefinitely merely because the club was mis-handled for a time.

SLUGGER WHITE PROVES CHAMPIONSHIP CALIBER

HOLLYWOOD, May 29 — Luther "Slugger" White has proven to Los Angeles sports fans that he is of championship timber.

The Baltimore Negro, recognized in Maryland as the world's lightweight king, ran into a tartar last night in the shape of Julio Caesar Jimenez, but managed to come through with a unanimous ten-round decision.

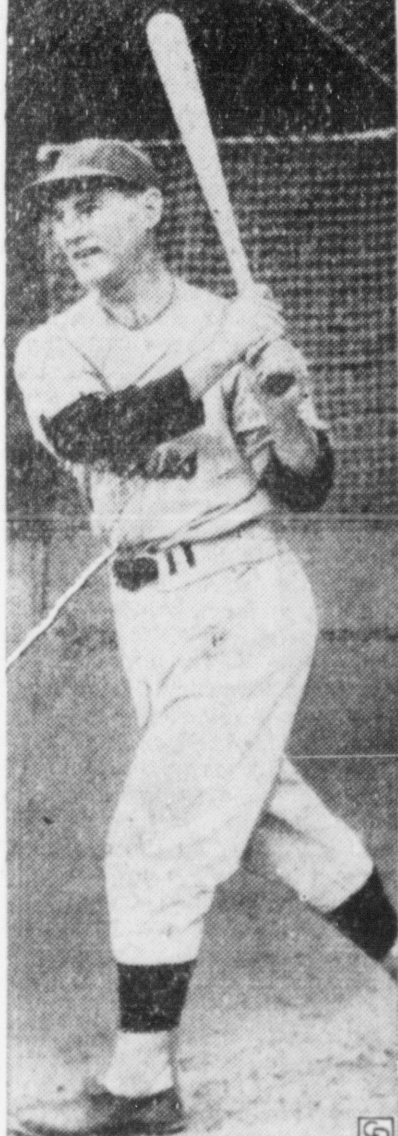

Jimenez almost provided a three-star upset when, after being knocked around in the earlier stages of the bout, he rallied in the seventh and eighth and with a slashing attack which brought the crowd to its feet clamoring for a knockout.

His right eye cut and plenty shaken up, White came back in the ninth and tenth to save the day with his boxing-in tactics.

PHILADELPHIA NO LONGER TO BE SCOFFED AT

Bill Cox And Buck Harris Receive Plaudits For Season's Play

HOME TOWN IS AMAZED

Crowds Entering Through Turnstiles; But Play Is Still Young

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, May 29 — Realizing that the Philadelphia Phillies might at any moment be overcome by an accident, such as a 50-game losing streak, I still think this would be a good time for everybody to stand up and give them three raps and a locomotive. Give it to them, and to Bill Cox, their new owner, and to Buck Harris, their new manager who was lifted out of the American league as part of the new deal that has made the club artistically and financially successful beyond the wildest dreams of a Philly addict, if any.

This was the club that struggled and floundered and finally came to be a mild disgrace and a perpetual problem to the National league until this season. It was the club that rival teams welcomed at all times as the one on which the standing (of the rival) and rival batting averages could be fattened on. It was a thing depicted in baseball, loathed almost beyond words by the others.

Through the years, season after season, it gradually had become more lowly until finally reluctant league officials belatedly had to do something about it, and suddenly took over for resale.

Cox In Big Gamble

Bill Cox took about as big a gamble as any man ever to enter the game. Getting a franchise in the old days implied a willingness to lose money if necessary and perhaps go bankrupt eventually, but that was as nothing compared with what Cox acquired and what he has converted into a pretty good imitation of a free-wheeling gold mine.

The thing has reached the point where baseball no longer must hide its face when the Phillies are mentioned. They belong and no longer are the family shame to be hidden away behind excuses and pretense.

This brings up the point that major league baseball for all its seeming savvy as a first line industry, can be stupidly slow-moving. They should have acted years sooner in spite of all the hollow sanctity of a franchise. The Phillies were so bad actually before the league stepped in and unloaded them on Bill Cox that they were a threat to the game.

He knew that Bucky Harris undoubtedly was cognizant of the baseball facts of life when he went there as manager, but somehow they seemed to have perceived that they had a chance to go places in these war times and build on that foundation for the future. So there they stand. They've played 500 ball so far, a modern world record for the Phillies—and they have made the turnstiles hum with customers to the point where Cox reportedly now is considering buying an oil company to supply those turnstiles with lubrication.

143,004 At Home

During their last home stand the Phils played to 143,004 spectators, including a sellout to their last home double-header. They are an attraction on the road as well—not great ball players, but hustling ball players who are so far improved over the Phillies of the Gerry Nugent regime that apologies no longer are necessary.

Bill Cox has instituted a number of innovations, including paid ads in the Philadelphia newspapers asking fans for suggestions, thanking them for their support and promising them further living of a club that was dead as a dodo when the current

GINGER ROGER'S MOTHER

Lela Rogers, mother of screen star Ginger Rogers, has been signed to play her original screen role as Ginger's mother in "The Major and the Minor" which will be presented on Radio Theatre, Monday, at 8 p. m. over the Columbia network.

Mrs. Rogers' appearance on the Radio Theatre marks her debut on the air-waves. Starring with Ginger is Ray Milland who will portray the Major who falls in love with the young lady parading as a youngster. The romantic comedy has an unusual twist to its fast-moving story of a home-sick girl who decides to return to Iowa on a half-fare ticket.

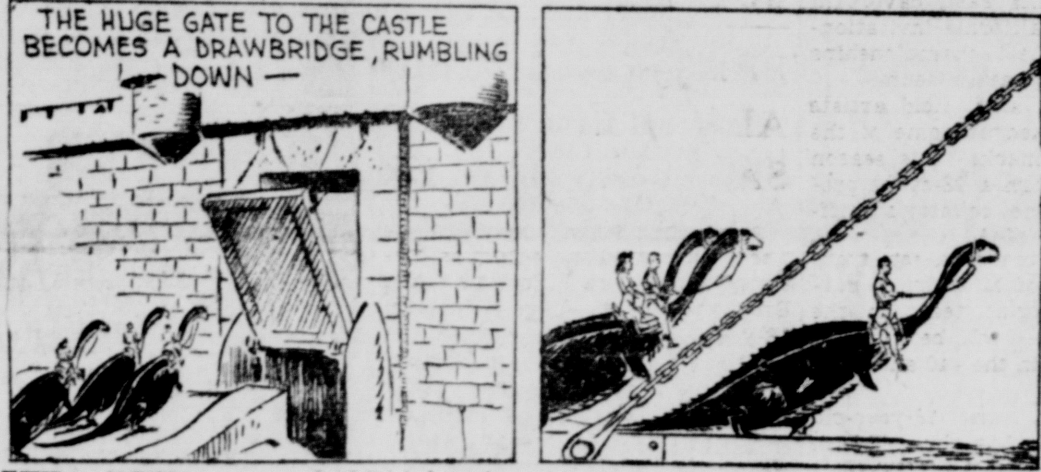

POET TAKES THE AIR

Although his poems have been read on Sammy Kaye's "Sunday Serenade" for many weeks, George Gingell, the band's road manager, has himself not been heard on the air. But this Sunday, prior to his induction into the Army, Gingell will take over the mike for the weekly War Bond appeal to the radio audience. "Sunday Serenade" will come from Chicago this week, as will Kaye's Wednesday night cigarette commercial, following which Sammy and the band return to New York City.

Capacity Crowd Present As City's Seniors Receive Diplomas

GRADUATES TOLD FUTURE OF OWN MAKING AHEAD

Col. Harry D. Jackson Gives Excellent Address To Boys And Girls

HIGH STUDENTS HONORED

Class Wins High Praise For Sticking To Work Despite Distractions

One of the most successful graduation exercises in Circleville high school's 85 year history, and also one of the most touching, since many of the boys of the class received mail Saturday calling them into army service during June, went into the school's archives Friday night. The commencement exercise was attended by a capacity audience, parents and friends of the class members filling all available space in the auditorium.

Adding much to the success of the evening was the appearance of Colonel Harry D. Jackson, post surgeon at Camp Breckinridge, Ky., Circleville's highest ranking army officer and a graduate of CHS in the class of 1901. It was just 42 years ago, Colonel Jackson pointed out, that he stood on the stage of the Grand theatre to read the class prophecy of that group of graduates.

Prophecy Fails

"In that prophecy," Colonel Jackson said, "I made grand plans for the lives of my classmates, and I had grand plans for my own life. My classmates let me down; I even let myself down."

The audience and the graduating class appreciated Colonel Jackson's appearance so much that he was applauded even before he was presented by Frank Fischer, superintendent of schools.

Kiwanis Keys Awarded

Another highlight of the program in addition to the message by Colonel Jackson was presentation of awards by Principal J. Wray Henry. Kiwanis Scholarship keys, presented each of the last 14 years to the outstanding senior boy and senior girl, went to David Orr, son of Mrs. Howard Orr, and Thyrza Ann (Patty) Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Owens. Keys to be given to each have not yet arrived, so letters from the Kiwanis club were presented. The keys will be presented later at a Kiwanis meeting.

Determination of students to whom the keys should be given is made through a point system in which all of the pupil's activities are considered.

Scholarships to Capital university were presented to Martha Jean Pile and Robert Schumm, valedictorian and salutatorian, respectively.

Colonel Jackson called on the graduates to have high hopes and ambitions. "God pity the man or woman who plods through life without ambition, without vision, without hope. Plan and strive, Class of 1943," the speaker implored, "and never slow up in your efforts to achieve success and happiness."

Measure of Success

"Success in life may be measured according to the mental, economic or physical ambitions of the individual, and success to one man is utter failure to another," the speaker said. "Same measure success by the size of the check they are able to write, some by the number of rungs of the political ladder they have climbed, some by the amount of acclaim accorded because of scientific or literary efforts, and some by the height of the letters in the headlines."

"But," he continued, "it seems to me that success in life may well be measured by the way we handle our own lives as regards our obligation to the old, old trinity of home, church and state."

Base Life on Duty

"You may throw out of the window a lot of high sounding resolves and base your lives on duty to home, duty to church and duty to state, and you will not go far wrong on your journey along the road to success," the graduates were told.

The colonel went on by declaring that duty to home needs no explanation. "It is, in short," he said, "love and respect for parents, the mutual love and esteem of husband and wife and the love and care of children, the preservation of the sanctity of the home."

"Duty to church, to my mind, means right living. I realize that I may find opposition to that statement, but be you Jew, Christian, Buddhist, or what not, the basic principles of your religion demand right living," Colonel Jackson said. "The church is the one institution that is essential to our private and national existence."

Duty to State

The speaker explained duty to state by saying: "This means just being a good citizen in the finest sense of the word. Too many are satisfied with paying their taxes as their contribution to their country, but duty to the state demands a great deal more in times such as at present. We must be willing to sacrifice, work and fight for the things we hold dear to us."

Colonel Jackson closed his address by saying: "This is my school and it always will be, and I think you will grant me that when I say that my father and my mother were graduates, my wife and I and both of our children are its graduates. My roots are deep in Circleville and on the several occasions in my life when I have had to be away for long periods of time, I have been more than glad to return. The last war, and Mexican border service preceding it, took me into Texas, Mexico, France, Belgium and Germany. This one into Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia and Kentucky, and the more I see of other parts of this country and of the world, and the longer I live in them, the better I like the place I call home."

Superintendent Fischer in presenting Colonel Jackson expressed the esteem in which Circleville holds him "because of his achievements in many fields of endeavor."

Martha Pile Speaks

Miss Pile, in the valedictory, discussed "The Dawn's Early Light", in which she told the story of the National Anthem, relating its origin in 1812 by Francis Scott Key and the fact that it was nearly 100 years after it was written that it received much recognition. "It was not until March 3, 1931, that the song was declared the National Anthem of the United States," Miss Pile said.

"Just as all America is indebted to Francis Scott Key for his vision of triumph and freedom," Miss Pile said, "so are we, the class of 1943, indebted to all of you — our friends, our teachers and our parents, who have made it possible for us to avail ourselves of the opportunities afforded by a free school in a freedom-loving land."

Boy Discusses War

Robert Schumm's salutatory covered the theme, "When Freedom Shall Stand." The youth, first boy to be named salutatorian in several years, declared that the very existence of light and learning is at stake in this titanic struggle between different peoples and different ways of life.

The youth pointed out that trouble with democracies overrun by Hitler was not in their ability to train, equip and support armies, but in their inability and lack of effort to make their type of government work efficiently.

"Democracy will be the type of government in the post-war world," the speaker pointed out. "There is no question of that, but there is a question of the support it will receive from its leaders and its people. Democracy must be won by each generation."

"If the freemen of 1943 could cope effectively with the situation today, they could set a precedent, which, with the grace of God, would endure indefinitely. The philosophy that 'might is right' must be driven forever from the minds and souls of men."

"Freemen shall stand," he concluded, "and stand and rule in a world where the happiness of the individual will be in proportion to his readiness and willingness to work and share with fellow men."

Poem Recited

Another feature of the commencement program was recitation by Martha Hulse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Smith Hulse, of a poem "Rejuvenation", which she had written. The poem has already received several honors by various publications.

The entire program carried a patriotic theme, flags of the United Nations being used as a backdrop for the stage on which the class in caps and gowns was seated. The 63 members were applauded as the curtain was drawn.

The audience joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner", this preceding the invocation by the Rev. James O. Miller of the Pilgrim church. Remarks by Mr. Fischer followed. Music during the evening included vocal selections by a mixed ensemble, directed by Miss Marjorie Vorhees, and by the school orchestra, directed by C. F. Zaenglein.

Class Wins Praise

The class was praised by Principal Henry for "sticking at a tough job" when high paying work and the call to the army and navy were always strong. Mr. Henry presented the class to C. R. Barnhart, chairman of the board of education, who presented diplomas.

Three diplomas were presented in absentia to Electrician's Mate, third class, Jack Hatzio of the U. S. navy; Forrest Schlegler, who finished his work in the midyear, and Nell Jean Moore, who has

DRAFT NOTICES SENT TO YOUTHS FOR JUNE QUOTA

Induction notices were put into the mail Friday by the Pickaway county Selective Service board to youths who will fill the county's June quota. Date for the induction may not be announced, and neither may the quota be disclosed.

The board office said that no married men, except several who have volunteered, will be taken during the next month. It also said that several boys just graduating from high school will not be called up this month, but will be left for the July call. The boys left for July have high numbers in the draft list.

Members of the county's May contingent, accepted last Saturday at Columbus medical examination center, will leave Saturday afternoon for Fort Hayes. The group will be in the charge of Donald W. White, Circleville, designated as acting corporal. Eleven men will report.

AAA REQUESTS EARLY DELIVERY OF LIMESTONE

Pickaway county farmers who have ordered limestone through the county AAA office are being urged to accept delivery of lime throughout June, July and August in order to ease the war-time strain on production and transportation facilities.

John G. Boogs, AAA chairman, said Saturday, that the wet Spring which prevented liming operations on many farms will intensify the usual peak demand for lime which comes in late Summer.

State AAA officials estimate that more than a million tons of lime will be spread over Ohio soil in 1943. However, up to May 15 only 70,000 tons had been delivered to farmers.

Pickaway county has ordered 4,268 tons and only 267 of them have been delivered so far.

BRITISH HAVE NO COLOR LINE

A British Security officer (similar to our FBI) telephoned Mrs. Charles Dewey, wife of the Republican Congressman from Chicago, to ask if he could interview her regarding a maid who once worked for her.

"It's a Miss Pearl White," explained the British detective. "I don't think a Pearl White ever worked for me," said Mrs. Dewey, "but I'll be glad to talk to you."

When the British security officer arrived, he explained that Miss White had applied for a position with one of the British offices in Washington and he wanted to investigate her character. He handed Mrs. Dewey a card on which was typewritten: "Pearl Palmer." And then in pencil was added, "white."

Mrs. Dewey explained that the girl's name was "Palmer" not "White." She has been wondering ever since how many people named "white" are in the files of British offices in Washington.

DUKE OF WINDSOR

The Duke of Windsor hasn't lost his lure. When he came into the state old State Department to see Secretary Hull the other day, the corridor was well populated with eager females.

One, wearing pink roses in her hair, peered over the bannister; another hopefully carried an autograph book in her hand. One of Sumner Welles' secretaries stood in the office doorway timidly, then gathered courage and joined others in the hall.

Hull's personal secretary, a grey-haired lady named Will Harris, who has seen the world's dignitaries for 25 years of Capital service, looked hopefully toward the door where the Duke would emerge.

Cesar Andrade Pleads For Understanding Of South American People

Americans, both of the north and the south, have a common interest and must strive for a united America, an America for all, Cesar Andrade, minister of finance in Ecuador, told Circleville Rotarians Friday. Mr. Andrade was brought to the city and introduced by Colin Campbell, district governor of Rotary.

"We are now struggling to win a war," Mr. Andrade said. "When that war is over, we have another great fight ahead, the struggle of arranging a just and permanent peace. That will not be easy, but it can be accomplished if we all are tolerant and understanding. We must be cooperative and honestly strive to promote the best interests of all nations."

Praises U. S.

"This United States is a great country. I have known it for years, have traveled from coast to coast, have met your people. I attended school here; three of my children are attending schools in your country. All members of my family are ambassadors of good will to South America from the United States. My fondest desire is that one day the people of the United States will know the people of South America as well as many of us now know the people of your land."

Mr. Andrade told of the visit of an American educator to his homeland. "He inspected our schools and found much to interest him. A high school superintendent asked the visitor to address his senior class, but the visitor was reluctant because his speech would have to be translated into Spanish. Then the superintendent told him that every member of the Senior class understood English, had studied it four years. Those youngsters were delighted by the visiting educator and regarded him as their friend."

Pleased by Wallace

Mr. Andrade discussed Vice President Wallace's good will tour to South America. "I am not a politician," he declared, "and I am not particularly interested in your politics, but I am interested in men. Mr. Wallace made friends wherever he went. He did not look up the government officials, for one can meet government officials anytime, but he spent his time

Rotary Lauded

Mr. Andrade praised Rotary for the role it is playing in international affairs and stressed the importance of the organization continuing its effort toward better understanding among all the peoples of the world.

In closing he declared that "Ecuador is as much interested in the future after the war as is the United States. We see strength and security in a united America, a united America we all need so much and which will have a proper place for all."

Capacity Crowd Present As City's Seniors Receive Diplomas

GRADUATES TOLD FUTURE OF OWN MAKING AHEAD

Col. Harry D. Jackson Gives Excellent Address To Boys And Girls

HIGH STUDENTS HONORED

Class Wins High Praise For Sticking To Work Despite Distractions

One of the most successful graduation exercises in Circleville high school's 85 year history, and also one of the most touching, since many of the boys of the class received mail Saturday calling them into army service during June, went into the school's archives Friday night. The commencement exercise was attended by a capacity audience, parents and friends of the class members filling all available space in the auditorium.

Adding much to the success of the evening was the appearance of Colonel Harry D. Jackson, post surgeon at Camp Breckenridge, Ky., Circleville's highest ranking army officer and a graduate of CHS in the class of 1901. It was just 42 years ago, Colonel Jackson pointed out, that he stood on the stage of the Grand theatre to read the class prophecy of that group of graduates.

Prophecy Fails
"In that prophecy," Colonel Jackson said, "I made grand plans for the lives of my classmates, and I had grand plans for my own life. My classmates let me down; I even let myself down."

The audience and the graduating class appreciated Colonel Jackson's appearance so much that he was applauded even before he was presented by Frank Fischer, superintendent of schools.

Kiwanis Keys Awarded
Another highlight of the program in addition to the message by Colonel Jackson was presentation of awards by Principal J. Wray Henry. Kiwanis Scholarship Keys, presented each of the last 14 years to the outstanding senior boy and senior girl, went to David Orr, son of Mrs. Howard Orr, and Thyra Ann (Patty) Owens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Owens. Keys to be given to each have not yet arrived, so letters from the Kiwanis club were presented. The keys will be presented later at a Kiwanis meeting.

Determination of students to whom the keys should be given is made through a point system in which all of the pupil's activities are considered.

Scholarships to Capital university were presented to Martha Jean Pile and Robert Schumm, valedictorian and salutatorian, respectively.

Colonel Jackson called on the graduates to have high hopes and ambitions. "God pity the man or woman who plods through life without ambition, without vision, without hope. Plan and strive, Class of 1943," the speaker implored, "and never slow up in your efforts to achieve success and happiness."

Measure of Success
"Success in life may be measured according to the mental, economic or physical ambitions of the individual, and success to one man is utter failure to another," the speaker said. "Some measure success by the size of the check they are able to write, some by the number of rungs of the political ladder they have climbed, some by the amount of acclaim accorded because of scientific or literary efforts, and some by the height of the letters in the headlines."

Base Life on Duty
"You may throw out of the window a lot of high sounding resolves and base your lives on duty to home, duty to church and duty to state, and you will not go far wrong on your journey along the road to success," the graduates were told.

The colony went on by declaring that duty to home needs no explanation. "It is, in short," he said, "love and respect for parents, the mutual love and esteem of husband and wife and the love and care of children, the preservation of the sanctity of the home."

Duty to State
The speaker explained duty to state by saying: "This means just being a good citizen in the finest sense of the word. Too many are satisfied with paying their taxes as their contribution to their country, but duty to the state demands a great deal more in terms such as at present. We must be willing to sacrifice, work and fight for the things we hold dear to us."

Colonel Jackson closed his address by saying: "This is my school and it always will be, and I think you will grant me that when I say that my father and my mother were graduates, my wife and I and both of our children are its graduates. My roots are deep in Circleville and on the several occasions in my life when I have had to be away for long periods of time, I have been more than glad to return. The last war, and Mexican border service preceding it, took me into Texas, Mexico, France, Belgium and Germany. This one into Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Georgia and Kentucky, and the more I see of other parts of this country and of the world, the better I like the place I call home."

Superintendent Fischer in presenting Colonel Jackson expressed the esteem in which Circleville holds him "because of his achievements in many fields of endeavor."

Martha Pile Speaks
Miss Pile, in the valedictory, discussed "The Dawn's Early Light", in which she told the story of the National Anthem, relating its origin in 1812 by Francis Scott Key and the fact that it was nearly 100 years after it was written that it received much recognition.

"It was not until March 3, 1931, that the song was declared the National Anthem of the United States," Miss Pile said.

"Just as all America is indebted to Francis Scott Key for his vision of triumph and freedom," Miss Pile said, "so are we, the class of 1943, indebted to all of you—our friends, our teachers and our parents, who have made it possible for us to avail ourselves of the opportunities afforded by a free school in a freedom-loving land."

Boy Discusses War
Robert Schumm's salutatory covered the theme, "When Freedom Shall Stand." The youth, first boy to be named salutatorian in several years, declared that the very existence of light and learning is at stake in this titanic struggle between different peoples and different ways of life.

The youth pointed out that trouble with democracies overrun by Hitler was not in their ability to train, equip and support armies, but in their inability and lack of effort to make their type of government work efficiently.

"Democracy will be the type of government in the post-war world," the speaker pointed out, "There is no question of that, but there is a question of the support it will receive from its leaders and its people. Democracy must be won by each generation."

"If the freemen of 1943 could cope effectively with the situation today, they could set a precedent, which, with the grace of God, would endure indefinitely."

The philosophy that "might is right" must be driven forever from the minds and souls of men.

"Freemen shall stand," he concluded, "stand and rule in a world where the happiness of the individual will be in proportion to his readiness and willingness to work and share with fellow men."

Poem Recited
Another feature of the commencement program was recitation by Martha Hulse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Smith Hulse, of a poem "Rejuvenation", which she had written. The poem has already received several honors by various publications.

The entire program carried a patriotic theme, flags of the United Nations being used as a backdrop for the stage on which the class in caps and gowns was seated. The 63 members were applauded as the curtain was drawn.

The audience joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner", this preceding the invocation by the Rev. James O. Miller of the Pilgrim church. Remarks by Mr. Fischer followed. Music during the evening included vocal selections by a mixed ensemble, directed by Miss Marjorie Vorhees, and by the school orchestra, directed by C. F. Zaenglein.

Class Wins Praise
The class was praised by Principal Henry for "sticking at a tough job" when high paying war work and the call to the army and navy were always strong. Mr. Henry presented the class to C. R. Barnhart, chairman of the board of education, who presented diplomas.

Three diplomas were presented in absentia to Electrician's Mate, third class, Jack Hatzio of the U. S. navy; Forrest Schlegler, who finished his work in the midyear, and Nell Jean Moore, who has

Ecuador Described
Mr. Andrade described his country and said that the equator "runs right through my back yard." He called attention to the snowcapped mountains of his land and the equatorial jungles. "Come to visit us and we will guarantee to give you exactly the kind of weather you desire, be it intense cold or intense heat or anything in between."

The visitor is a prominent figure in Rotary, having served as an international vice president, serving as district governor and acting on many world committees. I moved by auto and truck, railroad and plane, afoot and even by canoe. We do not have the transportation means you have in this country. We cannot yet afford such luxuries."

Rotary Lauded

Mr. Andrade praised Rotary for the role it is playing in international affairs and stressed the importance of the organization continuing its effort toward better understanding among all the peoples of the world.

In closing he declared that "Ecuador is as much interested in the future after the war as is the United States. We see strength and security in a united America; a united America we all need so much and which will have a proper place for all."
